EDUCATION

- Doctoral Degree (Ed.D.) in Educational Administration, Tarleton State University, August, 2010.
 - Dissertation: *An Analysis of the Texas Projection Measure as a Method of Assessing High School Academic Achievement*_ The major purpose of the study was to analyze the validity of the Texas Projection Measure as a value-added accountability model implemented state-wide in 2009. Results indicated the implementation of the TPM model failed to provide an accurate model for projecting mathematics and English/language arts TAKS scores from 10th to 11th grade.
The research also provided an analysis of the relationships between high school campus size, campus socioeconomic status (SES) levels, and levels of academic achievement. As the percentage of high school students receiving free and or reduced lunch increased, levels of academic achievement decreased. Interestingly as high school size increased, mathematics and English/language arts academic achievement slightly improved.
