

Christine Wortham grew up in central Michigan, earned her Bachelor of Fine Arts in Musical Theatre from East Carolina University, her Master of Education in Curriculum & Instruction from Texas A&M – Central Texas, and her principal certification from Texas State University. She is passionate about the fine arts, having taught in the areas of music, theatre and dance. Ms. Wortham is honored to have been one of the teachers to open Charles Patterson Middle School in 2009, where she served as the Theatre Arts teacher for four years. After spending the next three years in Pflugerville ISD she is thrilled to return as an Assistant Principal to serve the amazing teachers and students of Patterson. Once a Cav, always a Cav!

Prior to her career in education, Ms. Wortham worked both on- and off-stage in the world of theatre, starting and managing her own theatre company in the Chicago suburbs. She also spent a few years working in the corporate insurance industry. Ms. Wortham has two elementary aged children, as well as a furry third child named Boomerang (her cat). She loves traveling, exploring and generally experiencing new things. She's an avid shoe collector, but when she isn't shopping for shoes she enjoys singing, playing piano, staying active and spending time with friends and family. She believes in the power of having a growth mindset and is passionate about empowering people to rise up to their highest potential. "Hard work beats talent when talent doesn't work hard" (Tim Notke).
